LINDENWOOD COLLEGE CONNECTION

Fall 1995 Volume VI No. 1

A newsletter for friends and alumni of Lindenwood College

Building a new beginning...
Dear Friends,

Lindenwood College, for 169 years, has continued to be out in front charting new paths and setting new standards, while remaining true to the traditions established by Mary and George Sibley so long ago.

Now that the 1995-96 academic year has started, I find it particularly fitting to count our blessings. I am very proud of this year's class of students. Lindenwood students are high achievers on every level; they bring home high honors and trophies in a variety of academic and extracurricular activities.

In addition, Lindenwood College -- your college -- now boasts:

- More than 1200 students are living on campus, and we expect to serve 6,000 students of all ages during this academic year.
- Solid, yet innovative undergraduate and graduate academic programs;
- A conscientious, effective, and capable faculty;
- A highly effective recruitment program that results in an outstanding student body;
- A dedicated and effective Board of Directors;
- An outstanding balance sheet and overall financial picture; and
- A stunningly attractive and well-maintained campus.

Lindenwood College is successful because our students are successful, and those students become successful graduates. We are very fortunate to count over 15,000 alumni who have distinguished themselves and who have brought honor to this College throughout the years.

This issue of the Connection reflects just a portion of this success, and gives you different ways that you can be an active part of Lindenwood's growth. Even though we are thankful for the College's good fortune, there is still much to be done.

We have a very busy season ahead of us. Come and be a part of the success that is Lindenwood College!

Sincerely,

Dennis Spellmann

We're Growing!

The campus is alive with students once again, but this time there are more residential students than ever before -- 1,220! They are filling every nook and cranny in the dorms and Lindenwood has expanded to meet the growing numbers by purchasing Lindenwood Village II, the mobile home park located next to Lindenwood Village I. The new class of more than 600, represents approximately 27 foreign cultures and 28 states.

The school is enjoying record numbers in both evening and graduate programs as well. The summer quarter, currently in session, boasts over 200 students more than at the same time last year. Enrollment for the fall quarter, which begins September 30, is moving full steam ahead.

With this increase and the increase in day students, the College will far surpass the 5,383 students it served during the 1994-95 school year. That's good news, but it also means a big crunch when it comes to resident student housing. We had a waiting list this year, and fully expect to have one for the 96-97 academic year. If you know of someone who wants to attend Lindenwood as a residential student, have them contact us now!

Be a part of the success that is Lindenwood College. Call the Office of Undergraduate Admissions at (314) 949-4949 or the Office of Graduate and Adult Professional Admissions at (314) 949-4933.

Bigger, Better Computer Lab Serves More Students

Lindenwood College is taking a giant step into the future by moving and expanding computer space to assist students better. Lindenwood's computer lab, formally in Young Hall, has relocated to Latzer Great Hall on the upper level of the Memorial Arts Building.

The move will accommodate the demand for more space, and serve as a study area for students. Tables, chairs, and couches will be set up for those wishing to work together without disrupting others. The lab will also act as a lounge for evening students and commuters to relax between classes.

Students working in the lab may use either personal computers or Macintosh computers that are PC compatible.

Lindenwood is truly making a step into the future, a step that will help further our students' academic as well as professional achievements.

Lion Line Takes Honors

The Lindenwood Lion Line precision dance squad is truly number one -- five times over!

This summer, the women brought home five first-place trophies from the Universal Dance Association's Regional Camp held at Northern Illinois University in Dekalb.

The team received honors for spirit fight song, spirit routine, leadership, most collegiate, and overall excellence. They competed against squads from such schools as Loyola University and Southern Illinois University-Carbondale.

The Lion Line performs at halftime during home football and basketball games. For more information, contact Marsha Parker, dean of fine and performing arts, at (314) 949-4906.
Expanding the Scope of Lindenwood's Education

Top Teachers Join LC Faculty

Lindenwood College has furthered its quest for excellence in education by expanding the number of full-time faculty members to accommodate the ever-increasing amount of students and academic programs.

New additions to the faculty are:

- Shane Bowyer: physical education, sports information director, and baseball coach
- Bill Goodwin: physical education, men's basketball coach
- Phillip Hamilton, A.B.D.: history
- Jo Ann T. Haedike: communications
- James Henry, A.B.D.: music
- Richard Kotch: humanities
- Dan Kratzer: physical education, head football coach
- Kyle Naylor: physical education, assistant football coach
- Laura Rutter, Ph.D.: education
- Ana Schnellmann, A.B.D.: English
- Jennifer Vanderheyden, Ph.D.: humanities
- Jann Weitzel, A.B.D.: education

Rotary Club Establishes Scholarship

Future Lindenwood College students will become the beneficiaries of a newly endowed scholarship fund established by the Rotary Club of St. Charles. In early August, President Dennis Spellman received an initial fund gift of $1,500 by Rotary Club Scholarship Chairman, Barry Freese ('75). Freese said the Rotary Club intends to add to its initial donation in future years to create a valuable source of continuing scholarship funds.

The endowment is known as the "Rotary Club of St. Charles/Dr. C. Eugene Conover Memorial Scholarship" and honors Conover's memory, for his work on the faculty of Lindenwood College and his active participation in the Rotary Club of St. Charles. Conover served for many years as professor of philosophy and religion, as well as the chair of the philosophy department.

The scholarship, which will be used each year for a new incoming freshman from the city of St. Charles, continues the Rotary Club's 70-year relationship with the College.

Alumni Club Sponsors Scholarship

Kansas City Alumni Club President Jill Orthel Connaghan ('67) announced that the club will provide a $1,000 scholarship to a student from the Kansas City metropolitan area for the 1995-96 academic year.

During a July club board meeting attended by Frances Metzger Weeks ('40), Dorothy Berger ('43), Ruth Titus Lasswell ('46) and Connaghan, the scholarship was presented to chief development officer Gary Greene, who had been invited to speak at their meeting.

A Link To The Future...

You have the opportunity to follow in the philanthropic footsteps of Major George and Mary Easton Sibley, and Colonel James and Margaret Leggat Butler, by creating a link to future generations through the establishment of an endowed Lindenwood College scholarship. The purpose of the program is to assist deserving men and women finance a portion of their education while recognizing the generosity of the individual donors. With your help, Lindenwood can continue to attract the most promising students, regardless of their financial circumstances. For more information, contact the Office of Development at (314) 949-4903.

Join in the Pride!

Lindenwood College is starting a boosters club and we want you to be involved from the ground floor. If you played on any of the athletic teams while attending the college or if you are a loyal fan and supporter, this is the organization. We are also including other campus activities, such as the Lindenwood College Showcase Band and Lion Line. To find out about the boosters or if you have a name idea (right now we’re kicking around the idea of “Lions’ Pride”), please contact Bill Goodwin, head men's basketball coach at (314) 949-4809.
ARENA IS ON SCHEDULE!

Construction Moving Right Along

"Construction of the performance arena seems to be on schedule," is the report Ben Blanton gave to the College’s Board of Directors at a recent strategic planning session. Blanton, who serves as chairman of the Facilities Committee for the Board, is playing a key role in overseeing construction of the Arena.

The foundation is laid, with a great deal of the underground work for items such as water and other utilities completed. Now the walls are going up. "Even though we had some bad weather during the spring, we expect to be 'in the dry,' meaning completely enclosed, by late fall," said Blanton. "This will allow work crews to continue interior construction during winter months without interruption. The building could be ready for limited student access by spring and completed by the summer of 1996."

Goal: To Open Arena As A Totally-Paid-For Building.

"We need one million dollars to put us over the top on this building project," stated President Dennis Spellmann. "We are asking potential partners to 'invest' in Lindenwood’s future. The payoff will be a center that provides a benefit to current and future Lindenwood students and to the entire community. "The key to securing foundation and corporate gifts, however, relates directly to the percentage of alumni who support the College. Today we are funding a performance arena. In the very near future, we need to build more student housing, educational facilities and a student center/cafeteria. Regardless of the capital project in question, in the present economic environment, companies and foundations want to know if the colleges they choose to support have the backing of their alumni. If they do not, then, you have very little chance of receiving financial assistance," Spellmann added."

We need you to play an important role in completing the first new building on Lindenwood's historic campus in over 25 years. Whether you wish to make a cash contribution, a pledge, or even "Take-A-Seat" in the Arena, the time to do so is now. Please enclose your gift in the envelope included or phone the Development Office at (314) 949-4903 to find out how you can play a part in our Performance Arena Campaign.

Club Takes A Seat

The fund raising campaign for the Lindenwood College Performance Arena received a big boost in June when St. Charles Alumni Club Co-Presidents Marie Dickson Mahaffy ('63) and Glenda Raef Schaefer ('68) presented Alumni Coordinator Barbara Clark Kohrs ('63) with the club’s pledge to "Take-A-Seat."

"Only with the continued support of alumni like yourselves will the College continue its tradition of campus and community excellence," President Dennis Spellmann told the Club. "I am thrilled that all of you have chosen to be part of this success story."

The Club’s $5000 pledge plays an important part in the College’s most successful fundraising year ever. A seat in the Performance Arena Luxury Skybox Pavilion will be named in the club’s honor. The Skybox holds 278 seats and right now, only 86 seats remain to be named. If you're interested in becoming a luxury seat holder, call the LC Development Office at (314) 949-4903.
Happy 20th Birthday, LCIE

Lindenwood College for Individualized Education (LCIE) is 20 years old this year. Established in the summer of 1975, the program was originally designed to fulfill the educational needs of working adults. The program was originally known as Lindenwood 4 because it was the fourth division of the college to be formed (The other three were the College for Women, College for Men and the Evening College).

Lindenwood 4 was originally designed for mature, purposeful adult students, seeking a higher education while planning their own programs.

Today, LCIE is very much the same. The program meets the needs and wants of the adult learner by offering a faster pace, allowing students to bring in their work and other outside experiences, utilizing textbook theories, and receiving guidance from instructors. The structure of LCIE offers a viable and credible degree program alternative for the adult student who wants to receive a degree in this life-time while still holding down a full time job. Students take 9 hours of credits, one night a week for 11 weeks, and are able to complete 36 college credit hours in just one year.

LCIE, based on the Socratic style of learning, offers no tests. Grades are based on research, papers and oral presentations. Jerry Bladdick, Director of Graduate and Adult Professional Admissions says this style of program fits with the needs of the professionals who enroll. “When the boss has a problem to work out, he doesn’t give his employee a test, he expects the individual to do research and present a report that will solve the problem. That’s what LCIE does.”

Twice, once in 1985 and once in 1993, the LCIE program has been cited as a national model for adult higher learning by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. Originally, 34 adult learners came to the Lindenwood campus in the summer of ’75. By 1980, there were around 200 students; by 1983, 350.

Lindenwood 4 became LCIE after the melding of all the colleges into one main College in 1981. It grew in size and scope until today there are over 1500 adult learners with an average grade point of approximately 3.5, at Lindenwood’s main campus, Westport, the Synergy Center in St. Peters, and in special classrooms set up in businesses across the area, such as Mastercard and Olin Corporation.

For nearly 170 years, Lindenwood College has offered the best in education for all who wish to learn, and for the past 20 years, has offered that special touch to those who wish to pursue academic excellence, no matter how old, no matter how busy, and no matter how involved with their jobs and their communities. Lindenwood has always been the leader in success and we wish LCIE another 20 years of that success.

80 and Still Skiing Strong

Lindenwood graduate Lesley Herzog is encouraging “seniors to get off their rocking chairs and be active.”

One week before her 79th birthday, Herzog claimed the top spot at the Coca-Cola Cup downhill ski race at Copper Mountain, Colo. She is also included among the state’s top Budweiser Challenge NASTAR racers. She placed first in the 70-plus age category as part of the Budweiser All-Stars ranking program which honors the top men and women racers in all 50 states. Herzog began skiing at 48 when her husband decided they would retire to Colorado after leaving Monsanto in St. Louis. She has raced for 20 years and while her husband will not try skiing, he supports her effort in bringing home dozens of medals and ribbons.

A self proclaimed late bloomer, Herzog says one of the benefits of skiing at her age is most of the resorts allow her to ski for free. She is on the mountain three or four times a week, preferring spring skiing because the sun is out and the snow is moveable. She doesn’t ski on weekends or in bad weather.

As her children grew up, Herzog took college courses wherever they lived. She came to Lindenwood College for the studio arts program and majored in fine arts and art history, graduating in 1970.

Herzog is looking forward to the new ski season. She loves the competition but says it isn’t what it used to be. At age 80, Lesley Herzog is in a class by herself.
Life-Long Learning

Elizabeth Connelly was to be our featured student for the fall Connection, but before this issue went to the printer, Mrs. Connelly passed away. We decided she was such an inspiration and an example to people of all ages that we should run the original article. We would like to express our sympathy to Elizabeth Connelly's family.

Elizabeth Connelly, possibly LCIE's most senior student, attends Lindenwood for one reason. Connelly, 79, says her interest is in learning.

Connelly is not a woman of just talk; she takes action. She started back to school in 1993, at Prescott Arizona College, where she earned a degree in creative writing, continuing her love for education. Currently, Connelly is in her fourth quarter of her master's program in LCIE. "And I won't stop there," says Connelly. "There are so many areas I want to get into - watercolor, sketching, music, piano."

Connelly has already taken her creative writing skills to the ultimate, by publishing a book of poetry in 1994 titled "Voices of the Turtle." The book contains fifty poems, most written during the past five years with two written in the 60's.

"Voices of the Turtle" is divided into six sections dealing with a variety of subject, including a particularly emotional time when Connelly witnessed a child killed in an automobile accident. The book was published by Connelly herself, through a local publishing house and is currently on sale at Main Street Books on South Main Street in St. Charles' historic district.

Connelly and her husband raised 5 children. She attended junior college before marriage but waited until her children were all grown before returning to school, taking a course "here and there." Connelly is truly a life-long student, having taken classes in piano, calligraphy, philosophy, art, crafts, painting, drawing, and environmentalism. "I loved all of them," Connelly points out.

Commenting on Lindenwood College, Connelly says she is "struck by the acceptance of young students...they're a couple of generations behind me; they've all been so helpful and fun. I encourage them because I enjoy learning so much."

When interviewed after her class in Visual Communication with Myron Kozman, Connelly responded favorably. "This is my favorite class so far. It is truly joyful! It has broadened me already, I know. Each cluster has broadened me. I can only attend classes during the evening so that's why I joined LCIE. I like the clusters because I get more information. This program impresses me - the faculty, students, and staff."

Connelly will continue her writing by producing another book of poetry for her master's thesis. She lives with her daughter in St. Charles, having moved here after her husband passed away. Connelly will continue to attend classes as long as she can, just for the sheer joy of learning.

Lindenwood's "Senior Student" is an excellent example of how to blend education with personal lives, for as long as you wish.

Annual Dinner Recognizes Generosity

Lindenwood College's most generous supporters will be given special recognition at the annual Butler Society Dinner in November, held at the Lindenwood College Club.

Named for Colonel James G. and Margaret Leggat Butler, LC's most generous benefactors, the Butler Society is the premiere giving society for Lindenwood College. The Butlers' generosity built Ayres, Butler and Nicolls Halls, and funds from their estate led to the construction of Roemer and Irwin Halls, Butler Library, the Gables and Eastlick Hall.

Today, Society members follow the Butlers' example through their generosity. Through their understanding of, and contribution to our College's needs, Butler Society members share in the growth and development of one of the nation's leading independent, liberal arts teaching institutions. As philanthropic leaders, Society members are truly patrons of higher education.

Your membership in the Butler Society helps extend the vision of Colonel and Mrs. Butler. Like them, you will share in building an institution that will serve generations to come. Please contact Gary Greene, director of institutional advancement, at (314) 949-4903 for more information.

Sibley Performances

The first performances have been scheduled for the new and improved Sibley Chapel. On September 17, 1995, the Metro Winds Quartet, featuring Lindenwood's own Robert Carter will perform.

Following the opening night performance, Lindenwood College is proud to present the play, Everyman. Everyman will run September 22, 23, and 24 at 7:30pm, and will be performed by the Lindenwood College theatre department. If you are interested in hearing more about either performance, contact Marsha Parker, dean of fine and performing arts, at (314) 949-4906.

Students to Perform at Sheldon

Lindenwood holds the prestigious distinction of being invited to participate at one of the premier concert halls in America today, the Sheldon Concert Hall in St. Louis. Located behind the fabulous Fox Theatre, the Sheldon is known throughout the world for being one of the best designed and acoustically perfect performance halls.

After an outstanding performance there by Lindenwood's Guitar Ensemble last year, the College was invited back. In this year's performance, Robert M. Carter, assistant professor of music, will direct Lindenwood students and faculty. The concert will feature instrumental and vocal talents of Lindenwood students in the Guitar Ensemble, Saxophone Quartet, student vocalists, and the Jazz Band. Several faculty members will also perform, rounding out the evening.

This one-time performance will be held Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 7:30 pm. All tickets will be $10.00. Please call Marsha Parker, dean of fine and performing arts, at (314) 949-4906 for reservations and more information.
The following is a recount of a moment in Lindenwood history by Kriete Stumberg. We would like to thank Mr. Stumberg for taking the time out of his schedule to send us this story. Stumberg is married to Lindenwood alum, Cordelia Buck Stumberg ('40).

As my wife, Cordelia and I were attending a pre-graduation dinner as guests honoring our good friend Elizabeth Rauch, who was honored for the many things she has done for Lindenwood College since she attended Lindenwood as a student, my thoughts drifted back to my first recollection that Lindenwood College even existed. In 1911, the year of my nativity, my father was employed as the college physician and was a board member.

It was back in the spring before World War I that I became embarrassed. In those days, Lindenwood celebrated a Maypole Dance and had a May Queen. I don’t remember whether she was pretty or not.

My memory of that year brings to mind that on Lindenwood May Day, I was dressed in a little white outfit including white stockings coming to my knees and white shoes. My older sister Frances was going to dance with the other young ladies, weaving in and out around the Maypole. Without my consent, I learned I was to serve with my brother, both dressed in all white, carrying the train of the May Queen as a dance was performed around the Maypole.

I was brought in early afternoon, put in the bathtub, scrubbed clean and dressed in that white outfit with my hair slicked down to the bricks. I raised such a fuss, my daddy promised me a cowboy suit to quiet my protests.

I was lead down the hall at home to the front door and sternly ushered out. Certainly any red blooded American boy would have been ashamed leaving the house in all white when his friends were playing out in the street. But my mother’s firm grip gave all my playmates the opportunity to see their friend dressed like a sissy. I don’t remember even carrying the May Queen’s train, but it was years before I gained my position back in life with my friends.

It was not until 1927 at the Lindenwood Centennial Celebration that I learned to appreciate the pretty girls as I drove my team of spotted ponies, steering the stagecoach used in the parade. Inside of the coach were about six pretty girls. They paid no attention to me but at least I was not embarrassed by being forced to wear a white uniform and white shoes. I was more interested in the appearance of my passengers who were just as pretty as Elizabeth when she attended Lindenwood.

A Woman Who Left a Mark

In the spirit of Mary Easton Sibley, Joan Emsons Martin left her indelible mark on the lives of students. Because of this, the Hobart, Ind. School District named a new elementary school in her honor.

Martin, originally of Alton, Ill., graduated from Lindenwood College in 1946. While at Lindenwood, she was an active student, elected to many organizations.

She began her teaching career in Gary, Ind., with a kindergarten class for four years. After taking a few years off to have her own children, Gregory and Nancy, Martin’s career resumed in Hobart. There she taught first graders for 33 years in the same building. Martin was a dedicated teacher who went far beyond the call of duty to help her children. Music was her first love and her classes performed for many local groups in Hobart. Martin became renowned as a teacher as her students excelled academically during her 37 year career. Recently, with the assistance of ten million dollars, the Hobart School System replaced two older school buildings with a new, state of the art elementary school, calling it the Joan Emsons Martin School, after the teacher that meant so much.

Joan Emsons Martin passed away in January, 1991 after a long and successful career as a wife, mother, grandmother, teacher and friend. Lindenwood College joins her family in a feeling of pride and we know Mary Sibley is smiling on her.
Annual Fund Success Story

Lindenwood just completed the most successful fundraising year in the history of the College: total gifts from alumni, parents and friends to the Annual Fund exceeded $800,000, not including capital campaigns and gifts to the endowment.

This sets the tone for this year’s Annual Fund goal of one million dollars. Your contribution to the Annual Fund is vitally important to the College. Your gift can support scholarships, education programs, Butler Library, campus renovation, or can be directed to wherever the need is greatest. For example, Annual Fund gifts have helped us modernize dormitories and classrooms, renovate Sibley Chapel, and provide improved access to computers and on-line information to students and faculty alike.

Even so, as our student population grows, so do the needs of your College. Over the next five years, two dormitories and a new student center must be built, and new classroom space be made available to adequately serve the needs of our students.

Lindenwood is successful because our students are successful. To continue that success, we need your ongoing help and support. Your gift and investment in Lindenwood before the end of 1995 will help your College achieve these goals and perhaps provide additional tax benefits for you, the donor. For further information on how you can be a part of our success, please call the Development Office at (314) 949-4903.

Message from the Alumni Association President

As the last hot days of summer continue into fall, we can’t help but reminisce about those back-to-school days at Lindenwood. Remember the trips to the bookstore, the spanking new notebooks and the handing out of the first syllabus? These traditions are once again happening at “our” Lindenwood.

Fall is beautiful at Lindenwood and students are returning in record numbers. The campus is bustling and is once again in its prime. The Alumni Board is busily working on plans for this year’s homecoming/reunion. This is your way of staying a part of Lindenwood and reliving those Lindenwood memories.

Plans are also being made to put together a revised Alumni Directory. Wouldn’t you like to make that call to a special friend that you haven’t seen in years? The opportunity will soon be yours.

At this special time of the year, I would ask you to think back to your time and experiences at Lindenwood. It is impossible to value your Lindenwood education and social endeavors. Where would you be today without your Lindenwood experience?

This fall why not consider supporting your Lindenwood by visiting the campus during homecoming and participating with your honored classes (00’s and 05’s). Or how about responding to the upcoming survey for our new Alumni Directory and purchasing one to keep up with old friends. There are many things you can do, but it is important to show your support in any way you can.

The future of the college is bright and promising. Over the coming months and years we will complete a new performance arena, as well as other exciting new programs and facilities. Yet, with all the new things at Lindenwood, the essence of the college has not and will not change.

The times are exciting at Lindenwood College.
Be part of them!

Eric O. Stuhler
Lindenwood Alumni Association President
The Lindenwood Information Highway...

More than 70 years ago, President Roemer addressed a gathering at Lindenwood College with these words: “You cannot live on reminiscences. The past is for pleasant memories, the future for hard work. The future cannot feed upon power that is spent. There is no relationship between finished victories and victories yet to be won. Times change, Means and methods change.” You, our alums, are important members of our family. You know we have been through tough times to arrive at the threshold of a bright tomorrow. We take pride in you who demonstrate the continuing benefits of the Lindenwood tradition.
